Morning Session:

A Focus on Grammar Instruction: Using Authentic Models of Literature to Support Our Young Writers

Join us for a workshop that will demonstrate how to use authentic literature as models in order to ensure that students' written messages are clear, correct, and engaging for readers.

This workshop will address:

- Interactive read-aloud with a grammar and conventions lens: students discuss the rules and usage of key grammar and conventions concepts and skills;
- The Fundamentals of Grammar and Conventions and Common Core Standards;
- The impact of grammar and conventions on other parts of the literacy block: Writing Workshop, Guided Reading, and Independent Reading; and
- Grammar and conventions mini-lessons, conferences, and independent practice.

Afternoon Session:

Writing Assessment: How We Assess Student Writing Impacts How We Teach Student Writers

Using the text types and purposes from the Common Core Standards, teachers will learn how to examine pieces of work in their entirety and then look at the same pieces through a more critical lens.

This workshop will address:

- Naming and defining qualities of good writing;
- Analyzing and evaluating student writing to specifically name each student's strengths and needs;
- Designing mini-lessons and small-group conferences based on assessments; and
- Using standards-based rubrics to assess student proficiency and plan the next steps.

*Bringing along your own samples of student work will enhance this experience and allow for authentic analysis and lesson plan development.
